

Four color directions

A structured review of how the purchased palette could enter the product.

01

Tune, don't rebrand

/brand-concepts/1

02

Two-speed brand

/brand-concepts/2

03

Orange-first relaunch

/brand-concepts/3

04

New foundation, familiar signals

/brand-concepts/4

HOW TO REVIEW

Every route uses the same layout, venues, marketplace states, and booking decision. React to the color hierarchy: what feels branded, trustworthy, clear, and memorable?

Tune, don't rebrand

Green still closes the booking.

Keep the current warm editorial atmosphere. Introduce the purchased orange as a deliberate voice while preserving green as the trusted booking signal.

Kit voice

Existing warmth

Booking

Canvas

CONCEPT 01 - ORANGE FOR VOICE - GREEN FOR ACTION - ESPRESSO FOR ATMOSPHERE

TUNE, DON'T REBRAND

Find a court.
Book it.
Go play.

Keep the current warm, editorial atmosphere. Make the purchased orange sharper and more deliberate while green remains the trusted booking signal.

See available courts →

Green still closes the booking.

DIRECTION

A low-change evolution of the current PlayBookings system. The interface remains warm, dark, and familiar, with brand orange added selectively.

STRENGTH

Safest transition. It preserves recognition, existing interaction semantics, and the product's established warm personality.

EXAMPLE TREATMENT

Use kit orange #FF671A for labels and Open Gym moments, existing orange #FF9550 for supporting warmth, green #3CE074 for availability and booking, and espresso #17100B as the canvas.

TRADEOFF

The purchased kit reads as an accent rather than a transformation. Reviewers may feel the result is polished but not distinct enough.

Two-speed brand

Orange gets attention. Green earns commitment.

Use orange to create appetite during discovery, then hand the user to green when a real slot becomes available and commitment begins.

DIRECTION

A functional split between exploration and commitment. The kit becomes a visible brand layer without replacing the trusted green booking signal.

STRENGTH

The clearest strategic story. Each color has a job, and the purchased palette feels meaningfully integrated without losing transaction confidence.

CONCEPT 02 · ORANGE FOR DISCOVERY · GREEN FOR CERTAINTY ·
NAVY FOR STRUCTURE

TWO-SPEED BRAND

Find a court.
Book it.
Go play.

Use orange to create appetite during discovery, then hand the user to green when a real slot becomes available and commitment begins.

See available courts →

Orange gets attention. Green earns commitment.

EXAMPLE TREATMENT

Use kit navy #1F2937 for structure, kit orange #FF671A and #FF894D for hero and discovery controls, and existing green #3CE074 for availability, selected times, and final booking actions.

TRADEOFF

Two action colors require disciplined governance. If orange and green are used interchangeably, the hierarchy will become inconsistent.

Orange-first relaunch

Play louder. Book faster.

Let the purchased kit own the interface. Orange becomes the unmistakable PlayBookings action color while green steps back to status and success.

Primary

Deep

Soft

Signal

DIRECTION

A full visual relaunch. This is the strongest expression of the purchased brand kit and the furthest departure from the current product.

STRENGTH

Most distinctive and externally cohesive. It makes PlayBookings feel like a new, confident consumer brand rather than an incremental product update.

CONCEPT 03 · ORANGE FOR BRAND + ACTION · GREEN FOR STATUS · WHITE FOR BREATHING ROOM

ORANGE-FIRST RELAUNCH

Find a court.
Book it.
Go play.

Let the purchased kit own the interface. Orange becomes the unmistakable PlayBookings action color while green steps back to availability and success.

See available courts →

Play louder. Book faster.

EXAMPLE TREATMENT

Use orange #FF671A for brand and calls to action, #B33C00 for strong text, #FF894D and #FFCCB3 for supporting states, navy #1F2937 for structure, and green only for availability and success.

TRADEOFF

Highest change risk. Orange must carry transaction weight, accessibility needs careful monitoring, and familiar green booking cues become less prominent.

New foundation, familiar signals

A sharper frame. The same PlayBookings instincts.

Adopt the purchased navy as the structural foundation while preserving PlayBookings' existing warm orange, bright green, and warm neutral system.

Foundation

Existing warmth

Booking

Warm neutral

DIRECTION

A controlled test of the kit's dark foundation. Only navy is imported; the existing PlayBookings color language continues to do the product work.

STRENGTH

Modernizes the foundation without relearning product signals. It is the cleanest way to test whether the new dark alone creates enough brand lift.

CONCEPT 04 · KIT NAVY FOR STRUCTURE · EXISTING ORANGE FOR WARMTH · EXISTING GREEN FOR ACTION

NEW FOUNDATION, FAMILIAR SIGNALS

Find a court. Book it. Go play.

Adopt the purchased navy as the structural foundation while preserving PlayBookings' existing warm orange, bright green, and warm neutral system.

See available courts →

A sharper frame. The same PlayBookings instincts.

EXAMPLE TREATMENT

Use kit navy #1F2937 for page and chrome, existing orange #FF9550 and #E56022 for warmth and discovery, green #3CE074 for availability and booking, and warm neutrals #FAF4EC and #261D18 for text and cards.

TRADEOFF

The system may feel intentionally hybrid rather than fully branded. The purchased orange is largely absent, and cool navy beside warm brown cards needs taste.

Compare the strategic differences

Choose the color logic first. Individual shades can be tuned after the direction is selected.

	01 Tune	02 Two-speed	03 Orange-first	04 Familiar
Kit adoption	Selective	Balanced	Full	Dark only
Continuity	Highest	Medium	Lowest	High
Distinctiveness	Moderate	High	Highest	Moderate-high
Semantic clarity	High	High with rules	Medium-high	High
Best when...	Evolving gently	Brand and product share jobs	Launching a new identity	Modernizing before rebranding

Questions for your design reviewers

- Which direction feels most unmistakably PlayBookings?
- Which palette makes availability and Open Gym easiest to understand?
- Rank the four, then name one color treatment you would transplant.
- Where does your eye go when you are ready to book?
- Which direction feels trustworthy enough for a paid booking?